

CACTUS RAIN PUBLISHING

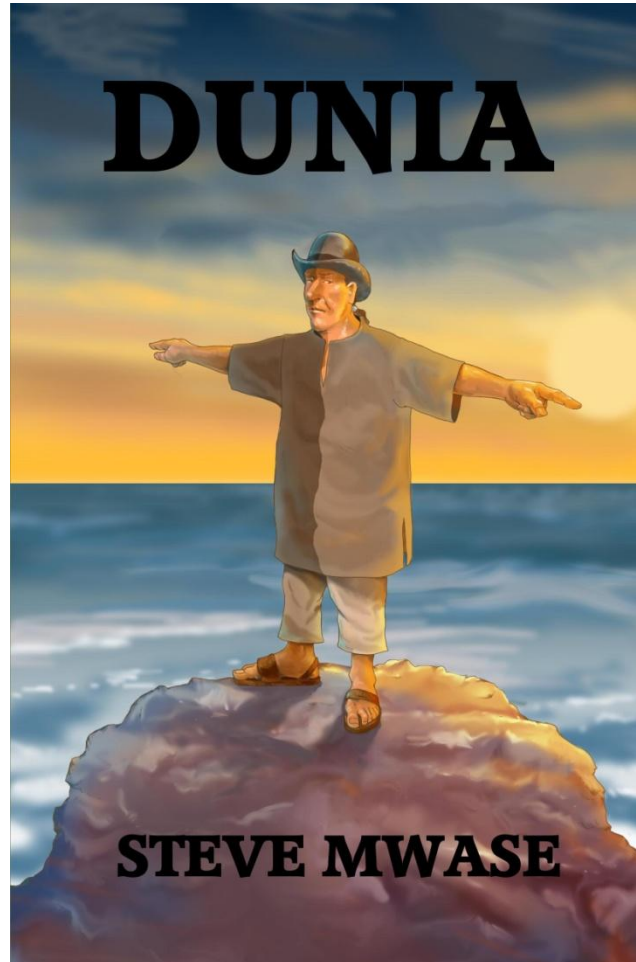

Author Steve Mwase

DUNIA: Cultural Fiction

Set in a past that parallels the present and future, this is a story about a land called Dunia mothering two races of people: the light-skinned and the dark-skinned. A large body of water bisects Dunia into two parts. Each part becomes a sovereign state at the center of cultural, spiritual, political and military rivalries caused by climate change.

At sunset a man climbed on top of a steep rock on the island of Dusampeal in the middle of the body of water. With the sun to his back, he stretched his right arm sideways, punched the air and announced, 'This is south.' He repeated the same drill with his left arm and added, 'This is north.'

ISBN: 987-0-9829181-5-9

STEVE MWASE was born in the district of Busoga in Uganda. He joined the army in 1979, as a cadet officer after the fall of Uganda's renowned dictator, Idi Amin Dada, and served in the army for fifteen years.

In 1995, Steve relocated to The Netherlands where he developed a career as a writer. His first novel, LIFE AFTER A DICTATOR, was published 2011. DUNIA is his second novel.

The Voice Achievers African Writer Award Winner 2015
Author's Website: www.dataf.nl/stevemwase

www.CactusRainPublishing.com

Cactus Rain Publishing, LLC is registered in Arizona, USA